COLIN EGGLESFIELD

Actor, Author, and Stem Cell
Ambassador

BIOGRAPHY

Colin Egglesfield best known for his lead role in the box office hit film Something Borrowed. As well as his roles on hit television shows such as All My Children, Melrose Place, and The Client List. A natural storyteller, Colin shares his personal insight with humor and humility regarding what it takes to stay resilient, empowered, and motivated in pursuit of the things that matter most in life. For Colin, this has meant going on over 2,000 auditions in his career (failing 98% of the time), surviving first-hand the events of the World Trade Center incident that left him homeless, and overcoming two bouts of life-threatening cancer while working on one of the longest-running and most-watched television shows in history. Colin reveals the tools that actors, film directors and producers use to leverage the power of human connection to inspire the multiple departments and personalities to work together towards a common vision. This highly motivating and inspiring keynote will equip your organization with simple actionable tools that they can apply the very same day to improve execution and drive better results as individuals and as a team.

In his book, Agile Artist: Life Lessons from Hollywood and Beyond, Colin shares incredible insight and the strategies he had to adopt not only to overcome the odds in pursuit of his acting career but also to survive two bouts of cancer. Colin's inspiring message of resilience encourages others that they too can overcome their personal challenges and adversity in pursuit of what matters most in life.
